

Our offices are open (again) from Monday 11th May

Following the Federal Government's announcement of relaxed Coronavirus restriction measures, and confirmation from the State Government that these will apply here from next week, we'll be re-opening our offices from Monday 11th May.

We've been fortunate that we've been able to continue, even with the doors close, as we work with our clients to interpret and implement the many and varied business stimulus measures announced by the Federal and State Governments. Nevertheless, we hope this will allow us to return to a greater level of accessibility for things like document signing, pick-ups and drop-offs.

In accordance with Government recommendations, we'll still be taking precautions, including restricting the number of people in the office at any one time, social-distancing and providing hand sanitiser for all guests.

If you're at all concerned about a risk to your own health, please continue to take advantage of the remote measures we have been using during our shutdown. We are available by phone and email of course, as always, and in addition we can use your video conferencing application of choice. We can even arrange for you to electronically sign your documents if you prefer.

While this is a tentative step forward, we're looking forward to the world opening up again just a little, and we hope you are too. It's only been a little over a month, but it feels like a lifetime.

We're here to help you, and we will continue to offer complimentary phone calls to support you and your business with the impact of this crisis and the resulting stimulus measures during this time.
